Cut through the cold with Razar

The new Razar range of 0.5mm neoprene garments are designed to be worn either with a wetsuit for added exposure protection, or separately as a standalone garment for tropical diving, snorkelling or any water sport activity. An economical alternative to more technical products like Sharkskin, the Razar range differs from its competitors by using a high quality open cell metallic neoprene in construction. Open cell neoprene is well known and preferred by most free-divers for the superior comfort and increased thermal protection it provides. The construction of open cell neoprene allows for a closer fit to the body, providing added comfort whilst significantly decreasing the flow of water through the garment, limiting the loss of body heat.
